Mr. J. Clark McGaire's Work for an Exploi

ing Expedition. The Washington Evening Star, the leading evening paper of the National capital, in a recent issue presents to its readers an excellent likeness of Mr. J. for men. The picture is given in an cently in session at Frederick, are the parations made for the Wellman expedi- Dashiell and R. R. Murphy. tion to the North Pole. Much of the iron in the arts and sciences, is used in the construction of three surf and life boats, which are designed also for use as sledges. Upon these boats depends more than aught else the success of the expedition, as it is proposed that the vessel in which the party will sail shall go only so far as navigation is practicable in the frozen regions of the North. In the Star's article, Mr. Walter Wellman, chief of the expedition writes: "After returning from Europe last summer the writer determined to embark in polar exploration for at least one year, if he could carry out his plans. He knew the ice pack could be traversed if the weights to be carried could be made light enough or the power applied in moving them could be made great To attempt this feat with a reasonable chance of success he knew certain constructions and devices would be necessary, and the question was if they were within the limits of practice in the mechanical arts. It was hoped aluminum, 'the metal of the future,' would solve the problem of greatest strength with least weight, but aluminum was only coming into use, and as to its value there was everything to learn by nothing impractical or hazardous could be ventured. "Accordingly the services of a young but thoroughly competent consulting engineer were secured in James C.McGuire, whose family is well known in Washington, and who is one of the rising men of his profession. A graduate of the Rennselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, having had years of experience in metals with the Phoenix Brilge Works, having seen field; service with the Nicaragua Canal Construction Company, and being of a conservative, cautious temperament, Mr. McGuire was just the man for such a task as this. For many months he has been hard at work upon the various features of our equipment, and for whatever merit many of our devices possess he is entitled to the credit. When the layman, projector and enthusiast proposed the impracticable or encroached too much upon the 'factor of safety' which every true engineer loves so well, Mr. McGuire interposed a professional veto, but in the main he has carried out the plans of the writer with most admirable results."

The Electric Railway.

Messrs, H. W. There is every indication that the road will be gone on with. Instead of stock being sold the road will. be bonded to the full amount of the capital required. The fact that Mr. Alexander Brown, of Baltimore, will handle the bonds indicates the affairs of the company will be in first class hands.

Flour Packers Quit Work.

The packers employed at the flour mill of the C. A. Gambrill Manufacturing Company here, quit work Tuesday afternoon and left the mill in a body. The action was caused by the announcement that the company intended reducing the force employed in that department. The mill it is stated, is not running at its full capacity at present, and it was due to this fact that the curtailment in the force was found necessary. The places of the packers who left we been supplied, and operations will not be discontinued.

THE HAVES BILL KILLED IN THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

The Vote Against It 58 to 31 -The Howard County Delegation Voted for the Bill but the Odds were Overwhelming-Democrats and Republicans Were Alike Divid-

The Hayes bill was laid on the table n the House of Delegates Thursday by vote of 58 to 31. Fifteen Republicans voted with the majority and eight with the minority. Delegates Haslup and Wolfe, of Howard county, voted against the motion to lay on the table and for the bill. The prevalence of the motion o lay on the table kills the bill. In voting against the motion to lay on the table, Mr. Wolfe said: "It seems strange to me that this House should adopt any such motion types. A general abstract of either when this is by far the most important measure that has been before this body this session. The democratic party has promised the people of this State an assessment for six years, and twice they have passed a bill and each time the Chief Executive saw fit to veto it. Now, I say, if the democratic party in this State expects to hold the confidence of the people, it is the noontide of time they give the people of this great and good old State of Maryland an assessment based on democratic principles, that equal taxation is just taxation, and my people I would serve them faithfully and without fear, and on the stump all over the county I pledged myself to an assessment, they should have come here this measure. I cannot afford to stultify myself; I shall stand firm to my convictions and to the promises made my people. It may be that I may regret my course here today and that my political life may eclipse in darkness, but, come what may, I appeal to you to carry out the pledges of the party. I shall stand firm until the last sun shall light the last day and the last lamp shall light the last night of our sejourn in the pretty little capital on the banks of the Severn river. If the enemies of this measure want to defeat it, let them stand firm, face the music and put themselves on record, and not stifle R in this manner. It is with as great a pleasure as I ever cast a vote in my \fe l vote no." THE SMITH BILL UNDER FIRE

School Men Object to It—Record of the Week Down by the Severn. It is believed that the Smith free school-book bill got a very black eye Tuesday. The bill, after passing the Senate, had found its way to the House committee on education. It was reportgive the school officials of the State a hearing, and to arrange for this Pro-James A. Diffenbaugh, school examiner of Carroll county, and a member of the State Board of Education, with Mr. J. E. Hill, school examiner of Howard county, appeared Tuesday morning before the committee. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Wilkinson, is from Senator Smith's county and is an ardent advo cate of his colleague's pet measure. Messrs. Diffenbaugh and Hill found that the chairman of the committee, at least, was not disposed to wait to hear from the school men, but any arguments to be made must be submitted immediately. Neither gentleman expected such a turn of affairs, but Senator Smith was on hand loaded to the muzzle and several other advocates of the Smith bill Gertie Conner; instrumental soio, Miss | were also present with speeches ready. and Hill had nothing to do but sail in and a lively debate followed. Prof. Diffenbaugh stated that the financial part of the proposed bill was unsatisfactory. The appropriations contemplated would not be adequate. The systems working in the various counties at present were much more satisfactory than the change proposed. He could Alberton Hall on Monday evening by have submitted statistics had he known

Admission | ground that the money to be appropriatfive cents, but every one coming is ed was needed more for general school purposes than for free books. He recited the present difficulties in keeping schools open full time, maintaining school property in decent condition, and paying teachers' salaries. He urged that the school people be given a hearing, that this could not delay the measure more than three days, and in view of the situation's gravity, it was well worth while to do this. He cited the action of the State association of school commissioners and examiners last fall to show the opposition to the Smith bill. When the more urgent needs of the schools were met. then, he said, he would favor free books. Mr. Hill also referred to the bill's financial inadequacy. It did not provide sufficient, he said, to furnish free books, and it would be necessary in the various counties to ask the county commission ers for additional levies or encroach upon the general school fund. Since county commissioners are, as a rule, difficult to move in the direction of extra levies. even for legitimate school purposes, the general school fund would most likely suffer diminution, and teachers and property be made to suffer. Hon. John Walter Smith, president of the Senate and author of the free-book bill, followed Mr. Hill reiterating the arguments previously made by him or the floor of the Senate when the bil was before that body. The Senator claimed that the public school system in Maryland is now perfect, save in respect to the book question, and that free books would bring the perfection desired. The committee upon deliberation agreed to defer further consideration of the bill until the Friday following. This was to give the hearing request-

House. LEGISLATIVE JOTTINGS.

Delegate Louis P. Haslup, of Howard county, is one of the hardest worked members of the House of Delegates This is largely due to his chairmanship of one of the most important commit tees, that on corporations. His committee holds daily sessions, and as in all matters in which Mr. Haslup is concerned, he is diligent in attendance upon its duties. Mr. Haslup's superior business qualities and his legislative experience rendered him especially fit for the chief position upon a committee of such importance as that on corporations, and his record during the present session demonstrates the wisdom of his selection. No man in Annapolis commands more respect and confidence then does Mr. Haslup.

He spoke of the method of changing ministers, of the traveling brotherhood of preachers, detailed its hardships and its advantages, and ended by declaring it the greatest machine for the salvation of human souls ever invented. He declared that the Methodist itinerants were, in his opinion, the 'cleanest body of men on the footstool." Of the Baltimore Conference he said: 'There is as much work done for Christ and as little heresy in this historic old conference as any I know of." He told the laymen to "use" the preachers, get as much work out of them as possible, and always be ready to uphold their hands. He had done the best he could in the appointments, and believed it as good a list "as any other half dozen men in the conference could make." The appointments were then read, and the conference adjourned. THE APPOINTMENTS.
